Amy Auster

ANZ

Amy Auster is the Head of Foreign Exchange and International Economics Research at ANZ. Her team is responsible for the international economic views and forecasts of ANZ, and for global foreign exchange forecasts as well as trade and investment strategies for ANZ and its clients.

Amy is a member of the ANZ Private Bank Investment Committee and within ANZ is often called upon to participate in the Asian and Pacific Asset and Liability Committees as well as in the Institutional Risk Council and Country Risk Committee meetings. Externally, she meets regularly with ANZ clients to discuss fundamental views and investment strategies, and is often interviewed by local and international media. Recent seminar topics have covered the impact of the global credit crisis on Australia; the rise in global food prices; the implications of the growth of sovereign wealth funds; the limits of "decoupling"; the continued development of Asia's capital markets; and the social impact of China's rapid urbanization on the domestic population.

Prior to joining ANZ in 2005, Amy worked as an economist and fixed income strategist with Chase Securities, Merrill Lynch and JP Morgan in New York. Amy has an Honours Degree in Arts from Northwestern University in Chicago, Illinois and a Masters Degree in economics and Finance from Columbia University in New York.
